Leeza Hernandez is a little big girl. At just 3 feet tall, she has a rare genetic condition called achondroplasia, which affects bone growth. But what

Leeza lacks in height, she more than makes up for in spirit and determination.

Leeza was born in 1993 in Laredo, Texas. Her parents were shocked when they saw their newborn daughter for the first time. They had no idea that Leeza had achondroplasia, and they were worried about what the future held for her.

As Leeza grew older, she faced many challenges. She was often teased and bullied by other children. She had to use a wheelchair to get around, and she had to wear special shoes to support her feet.

But Leeza never let her disability define her. She was always a happy and outgoing child, and she loved to learn. She excelled in school, and she was active in sports and other activities.

In 2009, Leeza's life changed forever. She was invited to speak at a local school about her experiences with achondroplasia. Leeza's speech was so inspiring that it was posted on YouTube, and it quickly went viral.

Overnight, Leeza became a sensation. She was invited to speak at schools and conferences all over the country. She wrote a book about her life, and she even appeared on television shows like "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and "The Ellen DeGeneres Show."

Today, Leeza is a successful motivational speaker, author, and advocate for people with disabilities. She travels the world sharing her story and inspiring others to overcome their challenges.

Leeza's story is a reminder that we are all capable of great things, regardless of our size or disability. She is an inspiration to us all, and she shows us that anything is possible if we believe in ourselves.

Leeza's Achievements

- Leeza has spoken at over 1,000 schools and conferences
- She has written two books, "Little Big Girl" and "The Power of You"
