"A house divided against itself cannot stand."

This famous quote, spoken by Lincoln in his 1858 "House Divided" speech, is often used to refer to the conflict between the North and South that led to the American Civil War. However, Lincoln's original intent was to warn against the dangers of division within the Democratic Party. He argued that the party could not survive if it was divided between pro-slavery and anti-slavery factions. The quote became prophetic, as the Democratic Party did indeed split in the 1860 election, leading to Lincoln's victory and the outbreak of war.

"Government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

This quote, from Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, is one of the most famous and beloved in American history. It expresses Lincoln's belief in the fundamental principles of democracy. He argued that government should be based on the consent of the governed and that it should serve the interests of all citizens, not just the privileged few. This quote has been used countless times to inspire and motivate people around the world.

"With malice toward none, with charity for all."

This quote, also from the Gettysburg Address, reflects Lincoln's compassion and forgiveness towards his enemies. Even in the midst of a bloody war, Lincoln refused to demonize the South. He believed that the nation could be reunited only through a process of reconciliation and healing. This quote has been cited as an example of Lincoln's magnanimity and his ability to rise above the passions of the moment.

"The best way to predict the future is to create it."

This quote, attributed to Lincoln, is a reminder that we have the power to shape our own destinies. Lincoln believed that we should not simply wait for the future to happen, but rather that we should actively work to create the future we want. This quote has inspired countless people to take action and make a difference in the world.

"I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have."

This quote, from a letter Lincoln wrote to a friend in 1864, expresses his commitment to doing what he believed was right, regardless of the consequences. Lincoln was often criticized for his policies, but he never wavered in his belief that he was doing what was best for the country. This quote is a reminder that we should all strive to live up to our own highest ideals, even when the path ahead is difficult.

The words of Abraham Lincoln continue to resonate with us today, more than 150 years after his death. His speeches and writings are filled with wisdom, courage, and compassion. They remind us of the importance of unity, democracy, and forgiveness. As we face the challenges of the 21st century, we can draw inspiration from Lincoln's words and strive to build a better future for all.
