The Art of Tatting

Tatting, also known as shuttle lace-making, is a unique form of needlework that utilizes a small shuttle to manipulate thread into intricate knots and loops. The resulting lace is characterized by its airy, openwork designs and can be used to create a wide range of decorative items, including lies, edgings, jewelry, and home décor.

The beauty of tatting lies in its simplicity. With only a shuttle and thread, one can create an endless array of patterns. The basic stitches of tatting include the double stitch, half stitch, and picot. By combining these stitches in different sequences and variations, tatters can produce intricate and elaborate designs.
