Plot

The film opens with a young man named Jim Bridger (Gary Cooper) leaving his home in Kentucky to seek adventure in the American West. He travels to the Rocky Mountains, where he meets a group of mountain men led by Kit Carson (Walter Huston). Bridger joins the group and soon becomes one of the most skilled mountain men in the West.

The film follows Bridger's adventures as he explores the Rocky Mountains and hunts for beaver. He also encounters a variety of Native American tribes, both friendly and hostile. Along the way, he falls in love with a Native American woman named Singing Bird (Lupe Velez).

The film climaxes with a battle between the mountain men and a group of Blackfeet Indians. Bridger and his companions are outnumbered and outgunned, but they manage to defeat the Indians and save the day.
